Advanced Active Shooters Scenario (A2S2): Tactics & Operations Course
June 18-20, 2013

Description:
Advanced Active Shooters Scenario (A2S2): Tactics and Operations provides training to combat potential Mumbai-style terrorist attacks against the United States, particularly the state of New York, in which small arms fire, automatic weapons, and explosives are used to attack a jurisdiction at multiple locations. The attack would be sustained for more than 12 hours, overwhelming any local jurisdiction's capability to effectively respond without significant assistance from other local, state, and federal agencies. Such an attack would probably occur without warning and would result in a high number of casualties among civilians, law enforcement officers, and other emergency response personnel. Although there would be fatalities, many casualties would suffer minor to life-threatening injuries, requiring on-scene emergency care in both direct and indirect threat situations, and evacuation to medical facilities.

Another consequence of such an incident could be significant, localized destruction of property and infrastructure from explosives. It is likely that a jurisdiction’s response to such an occurrence would require the resources of both law enforcement and non-law enforcement bomb technician teams (potential urban search-and-rescue (USAR) and emergency medical services (EMS)). This type of incident would also involve the potential of secondary explosive devices targeted against emergency response personnel.

Advanced Active Shooters Scenario (A2S2): Tactics and Operations is an instructor-led performance-level course. The course relies heavily upon a scenario-based approach to guide participants through a mix of situations that could involve emergency responders. Scenario-based training is intended to address specific areas of focus and to target higher level objectives, especially those that involve judgment and decision making.
